CONFERENCE OVERVIEW

The annual Safety in African Aviation Conference is part of the AviAssist Foundation's program to inspire and promote professionalism in African aviation safety.

The conference has been designed to help busy aviation professionals with the increasingly difficult task of keeping up with all the new developments, papers and guidelines that are relevant to our daily work. It will update and refresh delegates, and also help them create a platform from which they can build their learning portfolio for personal and organisational development. The conference is prepared and presented by fellow aviation professionals and gives an accessible digest of recent developments in light of the reality of everyday aviation operations.

Experience has shown that, in many African countries, it is still quite unusual for regulators and industry to come together in a setting in which neither industry nor government interests dominate. By organizing the Safety in African Aviation conference, the Foundation will bring together aviation professionals, policy makers and specialists to discuss pressing issues in aviation safety and to share information and developments that can contribute to improving the region's safety record as well as regulatory and operational know-how.

Twenty years of work in African aviation safety has shown the Foundation that communication and understanding is key when trying to improve even the slightest bit.

Now in its fifth edition, the conference has grown into THE annual aviation safety event.

Papers will be presented by leading experts. For this edition, around 100 delegates are expected from East and Southern Africa. The primary target countries for this fourth edition of the conference are Zambia and the countries around it: Angola, Botswana, Malawi, Mozambique, Namibia, DR Congo, Tanzania & Zimbabwe) - all countries with a growing but disorganised market. However, marketing for the event is done throughout Africa in the Foundation's own magazine SafetyFocus, via the Foundation's social media channels, direct e-mailing to the Foundation's email marketing database, through flyers and posters in the primary target countries, with media barter deals and through advertising in Africa's prime aviation magazines, World Airnews & African Aerospace.

This wide-ranging conference is likely to examine the latest developments in:

- Runway Safety
- Safety Management Systems
- Just Culture
- Flight training
- Flight Data management
- Operations control & dispatch
- Aviation insurance

And other aviation safety related subjects.

Whatever the delegates' aspirations, they will not fail to leave the Safety in African Aviation Conference invigorated with greater knowledge and renewed vision and a way to find your products and services.

Why sponsor this conference?

The African air transport market is the second biggest growth market in the world. Gradually, air transport becomes an industry run along liberal market concepts and sees operators, airlines and maintenance companies come up. Airports and air navigation services are being upgraded to accommodate the growth. These companies and organisations need access to best safety practices. They also need services and products you offer. But the market is much disorganised. Use your participation in the conference to get insight in the purchasing culture in the sub-region and organise your market. Establish direct contacts with prospective customers who usually find it difficult to get in touch with you without such personal contact.

The AviAssist Foundation's unique ability to stimulate discussion and exchange ideas is becoming more to harness the diverse nature of the African aviation safety community. The Safety in African Aviation Conference seeks to be at the forefront of this process and presents a unique sponsorship and exhibition opportunity.

- The AviAssist Foundation is Africa's only independent, non-profit institution dedicated to the promotion of professionalism in aviation safety.
- As a not-for-profit organisation we reinvest all our revenues back into the African aviation safety community through among others offering subsidized training courses on a variety of subjects and by distributing our free quarterly magazine SafetyFocus.
- By positioning your company, brand and message alongside the AviAssist Foundation's already well-established name, you'll be working with the world's only and well respected organisation that specifically targets African aviation safety professionals
- We will help you organise Business-to-business (BSB) meetings or product presentations during breaks and after the conference sessions.
- Your sponsorship signifies commitment to the African (and international) industry and will ensure you receive recognition as an active participant in the African aviation safety community
- In short, we provide a unique cost-effective route to reach key professionals and decision makers within the African aviation community, ensuring a targeted and effective outreach for your message.
